PREFACE.

The series of Liberate Rolls of the Chancery extends from the second year of King John to the fourteenth of Henry VI, and numbers 148 rolls. The first three rolls, those for the second, third, and fifth years of John, are not of the same nature as the others, but in reality are the beginning of the series now known as Close Rolls. Although the first of them is entitled Liberate de anno ij^{do} R. Johannis,* this title is only on the wrapper, which may well be of the seventeenth century. The second and third both have endorsements, apparently contemporary, in which each of them is styled 'Rotulus de contrabrevibus.' The third has also an ancient heading 'Rotulus terrarum liberatarum in Anglia anno regni domini regis Johannis quinto,' and an endorsement 'Rotulus litterarum clausarum anni regni Regis Johannis quinti.'† The first roll is on parchment of 10 in. wide, the other two 12 in. All three have been printed in a full volume with the somewhat misleading title of Rotuli de Liberate ac de Misis et Praestitis regnante Johanne, edited by Sir Thomas Duffus Hardy, and issued in 1844.

The corresponding roll for the sixth year, entitled 'Rotulus terrarum datarum et commissarum et denariorum et quietacionum anno regni Regis Johannis sexto' is the first of the rolls printed in the two volumes of 'Rotuli Litterarum Clausarum,' issued, under the same editor, in 1833 and 1835, and continued in the series of 'Close Rolls' begun in 1902.

The fourth roll, though entitled 'Liberate anno 10, R.H. 3,' is actually a duplicate of mm. 29–22 of the Close Roll for that year. It has been overlooked in Sir Thomas Hardy's edition. It is 13½ inches wide.

* Mr. C. H. Jenkinson points out in a paper contributed to the volume designed to commemorate the 700th anniversary of the granting of 'Magna Charta' that the unprinted roll called 'Norman Roll No. 1' is part of this roll.

† "Rotulus Litterarum Clausarum" was in all probability the contemporary title. See Rot. Litt. Pat. (1835), I. 24 b.

The series of Liberate Rolls proper begins, accordingly, in 11 Henry III, that is to say with Rolls 5 and 6 of the existing class. The latter of these is a partial duplicate of the other. From this point onwards, the series was continued regularly, one roll to each year, till the 39th year of Edward III. From that date till the end of the reign the rolls included more than one year each, and after Edward III there is one roll only to each reign. For the 15th, 16th, 18th, 19th, 20th and 40th years of Henry III, and for the 34th, 36th, 49th and 50th years of Edward III, the rolls are missing. In the 57th year of Henry III, the writs of Liberate were entered on the Patent Roll. Five out of the six rolls for the reign of Henry III, now missing, were in existence in 1381, as appears from the indenture made between William of Burstall and John of Waltham, who succeeded him as Keeper of the Rolls of Chancery. It appears from the same indenture that only one roll of the reign of Edward III has since been lost.* In view of the declining importance of the rolls, it may be doubted whether any others were drawn up in the later years of Edward III.

For part of the reign of John, and in the early years of Henry III, the rolls of the Chancery were made out in duplicate†; and accordingly when the first of the series of Liberate Rolls split off from the Close Roll a duplicate of it was also prepared (No. 6), which extends down to 7 January, 1226. As the other Chancery Rolls cease to be duplicated from about the same period, it seems reasonable to connect the practice with the division of authority during the minority of Henry III between the Regent and the Papal Legate, and to attribute its cessation to the king's assumption of his own seal at the Council at Oxford on January 10th or thereabouts.‡

The rolls with which this volume deals are written in the usual neat Chancery hand of the period on very fine parchment 12½ to 13 in. wide, with a margin from 2½ to 3 in. containing short notes of the contents of the writs. A few of them are much decayed at the edges.

† See Rott. Litt. Claus., p. ix.

‡ Rott. Litt. Claus. II., p. 207.

The reform in procedure effected by the institution of a separate Liberate Roll in 1226 was the lightening of the Close Roll by the removal from it of three classes of writs employed in ordering or warranting expenditure. This process is already fully described in the 'Dialogus de Scaccario,' a treatise written about 1179 by the then Treasurer of the Exchequer.* No money, he tells us, may be paid out of the Treasury by the Treasurer and Chamberlains of the Exchequer, without a warrant from the king or the Justiciar in the following form:—

"H., king etc. to N., treasurer, and to such an one and such an one, chamberlains, greeting. Pay out of my treasure to such or such a man such or such a sum. Witness etc."

In like manner, when a sheriff or other accountant is to have allowance for sums spent by him on the king's account, or is forgiven some sum with which he is chargeable, the forms of the writs are as follows:—

"H. by the grace of God king etc. to the barons of the Exchequer, greeting. Account to such a man or men such or such a sum, which he has paid for this or that business of mine. Witness etc."

"The king to the barons of the Exchequer, greeting. I pardon such an one," or "I cry such an one quit of this or that. Witness etc."

It will be observed that the warrants for the issue of money are addressed to the Treasurer and Chamberlains, who had the three keys of the Treasury, while the warrants to acquit accountants are addressed to the whole body of barons who sat around the Exchequer-table.

These writs of Liberate, Compute, and Perdono might issue under either of the two great seals, that which followed the king's person, corresponding to the modern great seal in the custody of the Chancellor, or its duplicate (the later great seal of the Exchequer) which resided in the Treasury, and was used by the Chancellor, or his deputy in the Exchequer, to warrant those writs which were issued in consequence of decisions reached in the sessions of the Exchequer.†

In this latter case, the writs were written by the Chancellor's scribe, the Controller of the Pipe of more modern times, who prepared at the same time counterparts or contrabrevia of them. These counterparts remained in the custody of the Chancellor's clerk, afterwards known as the Chancellor of the Exchequer. In the former case, counterparts were prepared in the Curia, and these were brought into the Exchequer term by term by the clerk of the Constabulary. When the accounts of the sheriffs and others were heard, the original writs were produced, verified by the counterparts, and finally handed to the Marshal of the Exchequer, to be preserved as vouchers.

* Ed. 1902, pp. 82-84.

In the same way the writs of Liberate remained in the custody of the Treasurer and Chamberlains, and were deposited in the Treasury* as their vouchers against the great account of the receipt which was taken from time to time.† There is no mention in the Dialogus of any Issue Roll or Pellis Exitus: the payments by writ were recorded by filing the writs, those made without writ by the cutting of tallies for the amounts issued.‡

By the period with which the present volume is concerned, certain modifications had been introduced into this system. At the beginning of the reign of John, if not earlier, the increase of business in the Chancery caused the substitution of a system of enrolling writs of which a memorandum was required, for the keeping of the file of Contrabrevia. One roll seems to have been kept for charters and letters patent, another for the recording of bargains made with the king, and the sums to be received at the Exchequer in consequence, a third was set apart for the enrolment of all orders involving the issue of treasure or the warranting of expenditure, as well as the livery of lands and such other matters. Thus we arrive at the three great series of Chancery Rolls:—Patent (from which the Charter Rolls almost immediately branched off), Fine and Close Rolls. As the second of these directly concerned the Exchequer, which had the task of recovering the sums promised through the agency of the sheriffs or otherwise, a complete copy of it was sent into the Exchequer as required. The series of these copies is known as Originalia Rolls. The earliest of these,

* Dial. de Scacc., p. 107.

having been preserved at the Tower of London and never transferred to Westminster, have been confused with the Fine Rolls of which they are copies, and are printed indifferently with them in Sir Thomas Hardy's Rotuli de Oblatis et Finibus, published in 1835.

In the same way Contrabrevia were sent into the Exchequer of all the items on the other series of Chancery Rolls which might give rise to proceedings in the Exchequer.

It seems, however, to have been considered unnecessary at the date when this volume begins to make such counterparts of writs of Liberate and Computate, of which the Treasurer and Chamberlains and the Treasurer and Barons, respectively, possessed the originals; and the term Contrabreve became limited to those orders to sheriffs and other accountants to pay money or incur expenses, which normally concluded with the words "et computabitur tibi ad Scaccarium." It is used in that sense throughout this volume. The word is generally written in the margin of the roll against each enrolment of a writ of this nature. It has been supplied in the Calendar, within brackets, in cases where it is omitted in the rolls.

In the Exchequer also there had been developments. As early as 1220, at all events, it had become the rule that the officers of the Exchequer of Receipt should keep a roll upon which was entered the tenor of every writ received which warranted a payment. These entries were usually noted in the margin with the names of the persons in favour of whom the warrants were drawn, and the amount paid in satisfaction of each warrant. The writs were entered term by term in the order in which they were presented, which at this period differed very slightly from that in which they were issued. As each writ was enrolled in full, saving the style of the king, it is possible to compare the dates assigned to each writ in the two rolls, and it will be found that the Chancery enrolment frequently describes a writ as witnessed "ut supra" when the Exchequer copy shews that its actual date was a day or two later.* These rolls, which are also known as Exchequer Liberate Rolls, are in reality the earliest members of the great series of Issue Rolls of the Exchequer of Receipt, since the expenditure without writ on salaries and office necessities is also entered on them term by term: and they are now classed accordingly as Issue Rolls. The only rolls of this kind extant for the period of this volume are those for Hilary term, 1233 (numbered E. 403/1202), Easter term of the same year (attached to the Receipt Roll E. 401/11), and Easter term, 1235 (E. 403/1203). These have not been used in the preparation of the present volume, but they will be dealt with in due course as Issue Rolls.

* These mistakes in the use of ut supra presumably arose from the scribes making enrolments of a given day with ut supra correctly in one roll, and then making other enrolments on a roll of another nature without noticing that the date of the last preceding enrolment was not that represented by the ut supra of the first roll.

The writs of Allocate, or Compute, as well as those of Perdono, which were normally enrolled on the Close Roll, were likewise noted on the Memoranda Rolls of the Upper Exchequer: but as these were not rolls of account, the enrolments are much less regular than those on the Liberate Roll of the Lower Exchequer. Both these classes of writs, like the writs of Computabitur which we have styled Contrabrevia, ultimately find their way on to the yearly Great Roll of the Exchequer commonly called the 'Pipe Roll.' They are not at this date entered in detail, but appear either as "per breve," or in cases where there is no need to specify this, by the mere recital of the expenditure for which allowance is claimed. The following examples will illustrate the process better than further description.

Writ of Liberate, as enrolled on the Chancery Roll:—

"Pro Galfrido de Taunay. Rex thesaurario et camerariis suis, salutem. Liberate de thesauro nostro Galfrido de Taunay quinquaginta libras de dono nostro. Et viginti et quinque marcas de arreragiis que ei debemus de termino Sancti Michaelis anno regni nostri xv. (substituted for sexto decimo, cancelled) de annuo feodo centum marcarum. Teste rege apud Wudestok' viii. die Januarii, per ipsum Regem coram Wintoniensi episcopo, justiciario et comite marescallo."*

This writ appears in the same form on the corresponding Exchequer Liberate Roll (E. 403/1202), except that "Summa c. marce" is noted in the left-hand margin of the roll and the name of the recipient in the right-hand margin. For Rex it reads "H. dei gracia etc." There is no other difference.

* Liberate Roll 10, m. 10.

Writ of Allocate :—

"Pro Hugone de Gurnay. Rex eisdem (sc. Baronibus suis de Scaccario), salutem. Allocate Hugoni de Gurnay xviii. marcas et x. solidos quas ad opus nostrum exigitis per summonicionem scaccarii et quas nobis debuit reddidisse ad scaccarium Sancti Michaelis anno xvi^o. in xl. marcis quas eidem Hugoni concessimus singulis annis percipiendas ad scaccarium nostrum de dono nostro. Teste rege apud Westmonasterium xiii. die Novembris, per justiciarum."

This appears as follows on the Memoranda of the King's Remembrancer of the Exchequer of the 17th year of Henry III, among the Communia of Michaelmas term :*—

"Baronibus pro Hugone de Gurnay. Mandatum est Baronibus quod allocent eidem H. xviii. marcas et x. solidos quos ab eo exigitis (sic) per summonicionem etc. et quos solvisse debuit ad scaccarium Sancti Michaelis anno regni regis xvi. in xl. marcis quas eidem concessimus singulis annis percipiendas ad scaccarium de dono nostro. Breve est in forulo marescalli."

Writ of Compute :—

"Pro Petro de Russeaus. Rex Baronibus suis de Scaccario, salutem. Compute Petro de Russeaus lxxii. libras et x. solidos de exitibus maneriorum de Craneburn', Pimpr' et Warham, et viii. libras que debebantur Huberto de Burgo de arreragiis eorundem maneriorum; quos liberavit Petro de Rivallis, thesaurario nostro, in garderoba nostra die Lune proxima post festum Conversionis Sancti Pauli anno xvii^o. apud Windles' per preceptum nostrum. Teste me ipso apud Westm' iiii^o. die Februarii. Per Ernaldum clericum de garderoba regis."†

This appears as follows on the Memoranda Roll :—

"Baronibus, pro Petro de Ruysaus. Breve de computando eidem, lxxii. libras et x. solidos de exitibus maneriorum de Craneburn', Pimpr' et Warham, et viii. libras que debebantur H. de Burgo de arreragiis eorundem maneriorum quas liberavit Petro de Rivallis est in forulo marescalli."‡

This writ cannot be traced on the Pipe Roll, as Peter de Rivallis did not account as sheriff of Somerset and Dorset.

Writ of Computabitur, or 'Contrabreve' :—

Et custum quod ad hoc posueris computabitur tibi ad scaccarium).
 Teste ut supra (sc. Teste rege apud Westmonasterium xxvii^o. die Februarii anno xvii^o. Per Petrum de Rivallis).”*

This appears on the Pipe Roll of 17 Henry III as follows :—

“ Kancia.

Bartholomeus de Crioll’ reddit compotum de Et in ducentis quercubus succidendis in foresta de ‘Tunebrigg’.
 Et in cariagio c. et l. quercuum de eisdem usque Dovr’ lxvi. li.
 et ob. per breve regis.”†

As the objects upon which money can be spent are infinitely various, and the writs described were the king’s usual means of spending, the subject-matter of this volume is necessarily diversified. The reader may pass at will from the king’s relations with foreign potentates, such as the Emperor Frederick, to whom he made presents or sent messengers, to his provision for the comfort of his own household; the expenses of a military expedition or of a hunting party, repayments to foreign merchants, offerings of coin or vestments for the shrine of Edward the Confessor or for the use of the royal chapels, details of military or domestic architecture, purchases of fish or wine for the royal table, all are alike recorded on these rolls.

This variety of subject has added to the difficulty of making satisfactory abstracts in English of the several writs. In some cases the article meant no longer exists, in others (such as ‘buckram’ p. 322) the modern name has lost its original meaning. Again the search for a classical equivalent such as pallium, or peplum, has, at times, caused a well known object to be represented by a word of vague and uncertain meaning; while in other cases the meaning of such a word as lambreschura has so fluctuated that it is impossible to guess the exact equivalent at a given date. A glance at the Index of Subjects will provide numerous examples of all these difficulties. It is hoped, however, by giving the Latin in brackets in all cases where the translation appears doubtful, to enable the architectural or archæological expert to supply the needful correction from his own fuller knowledge.

* Another roll for this year (Liberate Roll No 6), consisting of three membranes, written, like No. 5 on one side only, contains the same entries, in precisely the same order as No. 5, down to the order of January 7 in favour of Roger the king's crossbowman (p. 15, below). This enrolment is the last one on No. 6, which omits the cancelled enrolments at pp. 6, 7, 9 and 13, but includes those at pp. 11, 12, which appear in it without any notice of cancellation. The variations of its readings from those of No. 5 are, except where noted in the footnotes, such as can be readily explained by the systems of spelling then in use. At p. 6 it reads Harecurt for the Hacurt of No. 5. It is supplied with marginal abstracts from the beginning to the middle of membrane 2, after which they have not been added.

† The writs in this roll have the usual test, Teste me ipso (or Teste rege), except where otherwise noted. The first enrolment is tested Teste me ipso, apud Westmonasterium, xxiij. die Octobris, anno regni nostri undecimo. Coram justitiario. This form, which is of frequent occurrence, is represented in the Calendar by the words 'Before the justiciary' at the end of the respective entries. In like manner the form Coram J. Bathoniensi episcopo (and the like) appears as 'Before J. bishop of Bath' (or other prelate).

Liberate to Peter the king's crossbowman 2 marks to buy keys (claves), stirrups (estriwes), cords (nervos) and cork (*scorz) for the repair of the king's crossbows (balistas) in his castle of Corf. And to Russellus de Sancto Maxentio 7*l.* to pay for (acquietand') five tuns of must wine (musti), which were bought for the king's use at London from John de Gisorz, each tun costing 28s. And 5s. to make payments to carpenters and porters (bermannis) for hooping (cerclandis), barring (barrandis) and unloading the said tuns.

Oct. 30. Liberate to William Joynier for a vestment bought for the king's Westminister. chapel of St. Nicholas, Oxford, to wit for a chasuble (casula), an alb and stole, and a maniple (phanun) and amice (amice), 44s. 4*d.*

Oct. 29. To the sheriff of York. Contrabreve to pay to William de Insula Westminister. and Richard Duket 20 marks, to wit 10 marks each, to maintain themselves in the king's service with M[artin] de Pat[eshulle] to hold pleas in that county. Before the justiciary.

Compute to Walter Foliot 28*l.* 0s. 6½*d.* for the custody of the castle of Oxford and of the king's houses of Wudestok and of the county of Oxford for half of the king's ninth year and a quarter of his tenth year. Before the justiciary.

Oct. 30. Compute to W. bishop of Carlisle for the custody of the castle of Westminister. Carlisle in the tenth year of the king's reign 42*l.* 12s. 0*d.* and all issues of that year of four carucates of land that are of the king's demesne of that castle. Also 40*l.* for the custody of the castle in the ninth year and all the issues of that year of the said four carucates. Also to him for the custody of the castle for three parts of a year in the eighth year, to wit from Christmas to Michaelmas, three parts of 40*l.* and all the issues for the said eighth year of the four carucates. Before the justiciary.

Liberate to William Joynier for a vestment bought for the king's chapel of St. Nicholas, Oxford, to wit a chasuble, an alb and stole and maniple and amice, 44s. 4*d.*

[Cancelled] because [it is enrolled] above.

Liberate to Lambert de Franchevill 50 marks for 26 crossbows bought from him for the king's use. Before the justiciary.

Oct. 21. Liberate to brother Walter, chaplain of Queen Berengar[ia], and to Westminister. brother John the Hospitaller 1,000 marks for the said queen's use, due to her for the term of All Saints in the eleventh year. Also to the brethren of St. Giles's hospital, London, 60s. of the king's appointed alms. Before the justiciary.

* From this order onwards the writs previously described in the marginal abstracts as contrabreve (a description frequently omitted and sometimes added afterwards) are marked in the margin of this roll computabitur (from the words in the writ et custum, quod ad hoc posueris, computabitur tibi ad scaccarium), either in full or by compendia. The last occurrence of contrabreve in the margins that have not decayed is against the orders of 2 June to the abbot of Cirencester and the sheriff of Essex (p. 272, above), which are bracketed together with the marginal abstract (partly decayed) '[contra]brevia de prisonibus.' From this latter enrolment to the end of the roll the marginal abstracts are, with a few exceptions, confined to the names of the writs (liberate, computabitur, compute, allocate),
no description of their contents or purport being given.
